BOOK REVIEW

Everybody Always

KEY PRINCIPLE

Love People, even the difficult ones, without limits

HIGHLIGHTS

Love isn't something we fall into - it's something we become.

God gave us discernment, so we should use it as we live our lives. He's also given us love, understanding, kindness, and the ability to forgive, which have power we often leave untapped.

There is a difference between good judgment and living in judgment. The trick is to use a lot of the first and go little lighter on the second.

What I'm learning about love is that we have to tackle a good amount of fear to love people who are difficult.

When JOY is a habit, LOVE is a reflex.

God doesn't just give us promises - He gives us each other.

We are not held back by what we don't have - but by we don't use.

People don't grow where they are informed - they grow where they are loved.

When I wish I was the person who has it all figured out, I hear the gentle and kind voice of Jesus reminding me to once again stop laying SOD where He's planting SEED in my life. He's more interested in making us grow than having us look finished.
